GIVING US THE GO-BY.

The Debate on Calling of Steamers at Victoria.

Although we have several times referred to the debate in the Commons on Mr. Davies' motion, the subject is one of such great interest to our citizens that a correct and verbatim report of what was said by the British Columbia members will still be interesting. We therefore republish the report of Messrs. Mara and Prior's speeches as given in the House after a long debate had taken place on the vote of the subsidy to the Pacific mail steamers, the opposition specially insisting that the Government should give the House more information on the subject before the vote was taken. Mr. Davies, of P. E. I., after a lengthy speech, moved the following resolution:

"That all the words after the word "that" be struck out, and the following substituted therefor: 'This House should not be asked to agree to a resolution providing for the granting of an annual subsidy for a fortnightly or monthly steamship service between British Columbia and China and Japan, supplementary to one to be granted by the British Government, until the correspondence and negotiations relative to the granting of such a subsidy and the agreements between the British Government and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company under which the subsidy of the British Government is payable, and all other necessary information relative to the character of the service, have been laid before it; and the House is further of opinion, from the information at present before it, that, if any subsidy is voted for such service, it should be conditional on the steamships calling at either Victoria or Esquimalt.'"

After this had been debated by Messrs Foster, Mills and other leaders, our representatives spoke as follows:

Mr. MARA—With regard to the portion of the amendment which states that the subsidy should be conditional on a steamship calling at Victoria or Esquimalt, I may say that is not the question. It has been threshed out in the British Columbia press for some time past, it has been discussed in the Boards of Trade, and it has had the attention of the members from British Columbia in the earlier days of the session. It has been stated by one honorable gentleman that there are two rival cities in that province, and that jealousy exists between them. As far as the members from British Columbia are concerned, there is no jealousy whatever. We are all proud of Victoria, and of the position which Victoria has attained; but this is not a question relating either to Victoria or Vancouver; it is not a provincial question; it is not only a Dominion question, but it is an Imperial and Dominion question. We are asking the Imperial Government to give us $3 to $1 to assist us in diverting the eastern trade from the Isthmus of Suez and from American channels so that it will be carried through British territory and over Canadian soil. We are asking the Imperial Government to assist us in bringing the passenger traffic and the trade of the east over our trans-continental railway, and in making, as has been previously said, the termini of the Canadian Pacific Railway, not at Halifax or Vancouver, but at Hong Kong and Liverpool. For these reasons, I must vote against the whole of the amendment, but I wish to state the position in which the majority of the members for British Columbia are placed as to the latter part of it. Of course, my hon. friend from Victoria (Mr. Prior) differs slightly with us in this respect, that, as a representative of Victoria, and as the Board of Trade and the press of Victoria have demanded that the steamers should call there, he may feel bound in honor to vote for that part of the amendment; but as the other members of the Province take a Dominion view—

Mr. DAVIES (P.E.I.) That is hard on the member for Victoria.

Mr. MARA. I do not think so, and further, I think that the hon. member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) has inserted that portion of the amendment in order to place my hon. friend (Mr. Prior) in a false position. I think, in fact, that he has introduced the amendment in order to place, if possible, the whole of the members from British Columbia in a bad position. But my constituents do not wish me, nor do I believe that any constituency outside of Victoria would wish its representatives to vote for the amendment with that clause attached to it. Further, although the hon. gentleman may think that the residents of Victoria will thank him for the amendment he has offered, I believe they will look upon him rather as a false than a true friend. Though I am prepared to admit that the hon. gentleman has introduced his amendment from fair and honorable motives, still, from the great distance, not knowing how party feelings actuate members here, I believe the people of Victoria will not be quite as charitable to him as I am, and they may think that he has done this not only to embarrass the Government and to embarrass the members from British Columbia, but that he has acted the part of a false friend, and has given them a stab in the back.

Mr. PRIOR—I stated to the House, two or three evenings ago, the importance of these steamships calling at Victoria, and I gave the reasons, that Victoria is the capital of the province, that it does at least 75 per cent. of the trade of the province, and that it is not out of the way of home steamers to call there. As the honorable member for Queen's (Mr. Davies) had said, it would not take more than an hour and a half or two hours for these steamers to call there and leave the mails and passengers, and that is all we ask. My honorable friend who has just sat down (Mr. Mara) says there is a jealousy between the two cities. I say there is no jealousy except the proper rivalry between two cities which are endeavoring to get ahead of one another in an honorable way.

Mr. MARA—I referred to a remark made by a gentleman opposite that there was jealousy. I said there was none.

Mr. PRIOR—Well, if my honorable friend did not say so, I apologize. In regard to the question of the steamships calling at Victoria, although the Imperial Government give $3 to $1 which is proposed to be given by us, I do not see why the Dominion should not have some say in the matter. I think it would be a gross injustice to Victoria, unless the Dominion Government does its best with the Imperial Government, to get those steamers to call there. As to the amendment of the honorable member for Queen's (Mr. Davies), I agree with my honorable friend from Yale (Mr. Mara) that it does put me in an awkward position. If he had brought the matter down in two different amendments, I should have known what to do, because, though I am bound to ask that the Dominion Government should make it imperative for the steamers to call at Victoria, still, if they will not or cannot do that, I could not go so far as to vote for no subsidy being given, because I do not think any member should stand in the way of the advancement of the whole Dominion. I think I have a right to ask something of the House. Dr. Bourinot, in his "Parliamentary Procedure," says: "As respects what are known, in parliamentary language as 'complicated questions,' they may always be divided into distinct parts with the consent of the House. No individual member, however, can ask as a matter of right, that such a question be divided, since the House alone can properly decide whether it is complicated or not; and into how many propositions it may be divided. The fact is, the necessity of dividing a complicated question may be obviated in a great measure by moving amendments to it. But, in any case, it is always open to a member to move formally that a question be divided."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would ask the honorable member for Queen's if he would not divide his question.

Mr. DAVIES—My question is so very simple that it cannot be divided.

Mr. PRIOR—I think it is very complicated.

CHANGES IN GERMAN ARMY

Regarded as Significant in English Military Circles.

English military critics are greatly exercised at the recent changes in the German army and claim to see in them a more pessimistic omen than any of the late occurrences of the Balkan States. A leading British general who has served with distinction in India and Egypt, speaking on the subject recently, said: "The newest list of promotions in the German army contain an item of the most suggestive nature. Three generals are placed on the general staff of the army with the title of upper quartermaster, nothing being said as to their functions. The present chief of the staff, when appointed as assistant and deputy to his predecessor, was called quartermaster general. The three officers upon whom an inferior grade of the same kind is now conferred may be presumed, therefore, to have been selected for service closely resembling that of the chief of the great general staff. It is inferred that their business will be to act as chiefs of the staffs to armies in the field.

The army, as a whole, has this post of adviser to the commander in chief always filled in peace by the man who will occupy it in war. Similarly each army corps has a permanent chief of the staff. The intention seems to be to give those who will in war time have to act as the generals commanding bodies composed of four active army corps, an opportunity to prepare themselves during peace for this service. When it is remembered that the commander of a German army is usually, though not always, a royal prince, and that his chief of the staff has therefore a position of very great responsibility, the importance of the step just taken will at once be seen. But there may possibly be a further import in the appointment. On previous occasions the selection of such advisers was only made when war was actually expected. It is worth noting also that one of the probable commanders of an army, General Von Schlothein, has just retired, though his name is to be kept on the active list. Meanwhile, in England we are still without a proper war preparation department either for the army or for the navy."

A NATION'S REJOICING

Continuation of the Centennial Festivities in New York To-day.

A Brilliant Display—Immense Concourse of People. Indian Atrocities.

[By Postal Telegraph.]

New York, May 1.—Judging by crowds already on the streets early this morning, visitors to the great centennial celebration are not wearied with the holiday of leisure and sight seeing. The scene on the principal avenues does not differ therefor very greatly from those which have been described in the previous two days of the celebration. The activity is largely up town, however, as the industrial parade, which is a feature of to-day's celebration, does not come further down town than Canal street. Grand stands on Union Square, Madison Square and also Waverley Place, and private stands on upper Fifth Avenue are the principal attractions this morning, and many persons, warned by the crush of yesterday, are already securing places on them to avoid the discomfort which must come later. Interest is universal in to-day's parade, as it has been possible thus far to give only a general description of many of the features and curiosities. There is every indication now that the crowd on the streets will be even more numerous than yesterday, and even more difficult to control, as points in which they are massed are more limited. Yesterday's scenes on the elevated trains and street cars are repeated to-day. All are filled in every spot and crowds on elevated road platforms are so dense that passengers have the utmost difficulty in entering and leaving cars. Activity and bustle are apparently as great as ever; in this there is no change since the first day's celebration began. The weather is all that could be desired, the sun is shining brightly and the air clear and cool. Nothing more perfect is wanting to the enjoyment of the celebration could possibly be imagined.

New York, May 1.—The great event of to-day was the last in the series to commemorate the inauguration of Washington, and was a civic parade designed to illustrate the industrial progress of the country during a century of national life. From early morning crowds began to gather at all the places along the line of march, and by 8 a. m. the sidewalks were fringed with a waiting throng. Stands, windows and open places in front of the President's reviewing stand, on Madison Square, were especially crowded. The parade was under the management of General Daniel Butterfield as chief marshall. The streets leading east and west from 5th to 59th street, were alive with delegations from various organizations, which were to comprise the procession, so that when the order to start was given each detachment fell into line without delay or confusion. The President arrived at the reviewing stand from the Morton House shortly after 9 a. m. The parade started from 57th street and 5th avenue at 9:20, the column passing down the avenue. As it reached 27th street Mayor Grant, with representative delegates from industrial and commercial societies and organizations of New York, were stationed in that vicinity awaiting its approach and took the lead until the reviewing stand was reached. Reaching the stand, the Mayor presented Harrison with an address amid great applause from the multitude and booming of a hundred guns as a salute. The city representatives then took their seats on the reviewing stand reserved for them. The column then proceeded down the avenue past the grand stand, the bands playing and flags waving. As the ranks passed the stand one continuous cheer went up. First came a detachment of mounted police, followed by a detail of police on foot; then came gentlemen detailed by the governors on Gen. Butterfield's staff to represent their several States; next were chiefs of organizations of veteran regiments of New York militia and volunteers; then, separated by drum corps, came 100 veteran regular soldiers, sailors and 25th regiment of New York volunteers, veteran associations surrounding it as escort. The first tableaux in the parade represented the reading of the Declaration of Independence at state house yard, Philadelphia, by John Nixon, July 8th, 1776. The next division contained 400 students of Columbia College and 300 from the College of the City of New York, escorting the tableaux, "Washington and Generals mounted," which elicited enthusiastic applause. One thousand children from New York and Brooklyn followed, escorting the tableaux of Washington crossing the Delaware, and Lafayette Guards guarding tableau;" Washington's farewell to officers, then came the Knights Templars and Knights Pythias, escorting the tableau, "Washington resigning his commission at Annapolis," Lafayette Conclave, Wingsbridge, Springton, Dingwell Cadets, and Yonkers Continental Guards, escorting the tableau, "Washington's Inauguration." The next tableau represented the State of Virginia, escorted by the Phelps Guard, Washington's Continental Guard and Excelsior Light infantry, and the Sons of Veterans following, guarding the tableau representing New York, Massachusetts Delaware, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. Then came 600 Foresters escorting the tableau representing "Georgia 1732," the last colony settled before the revolution. Among the many other tableaux in the parade were ship joiners with vessels on trucks and floats, plasterers, coke makers, painters, marble cutters, plumbers, gas fitters, carpenters, all engaged in a practical illustration of handicrafts and escorted by large delegations of fellow workmen. The division which attracted much attention was the military and civic organization of various nationalities; their tableaux were Columbus, Washington, Italy and America. The German citizens' societies numbered 25,000 men, led by Marshal Schiefer. In passing the reviewing stands various German-American singing societies rendered popular musical selections. In this division was an allegorical tableau designed by Keppler, editor of Puck, and which possessed great artistic merit. It was industries by which German-American citizens were chiefly identified, represented by living figures. These tableaux were modelled upon those of the New Orleans Mardi Gras carnival, and equalled in magnificence. Dozens of other tableaux followed, all more or less magnificent. The Irish-American League mustered 10,000 strong, under the leadership of General J. O'Brien and General M. T. McMahon. They attracted great enthusiasm. The total number actually marching was about 80,000. The enthusiasm all along the route was, if possible, greater than that of yesterday.

INDIAN ATROCITIES.

Tucson, Ariz., May 1.—The military authorities at San Carlos reservation were notified last night by Capt. Whitelaw, of Silver City, New Mexico, and Geo. Stratton, Supt. of San Simon Cattle Co., that a large band of hostile Apache Indians had attacked two miners near the headquarters of a ranch, 60 miles south from San Simon station on the Southern Pacific Ry., and 125 miles east of Tucson. They killed a man named Cady and wounded another man. Cady was shot through the leg. He was then placed over a cooking stove and held there until death released him from suffering. From the trail and the number of hoof marks made by horses, there seems to be a large number of Indians in the band. They took all the provisions obtainable and started towards Mexico, pursued by five Vaqueros. Capt. Whitehill is the sheriff for Silver City and is reliable. He says the news he brings is true. Much uneasiness is felt along the San Pedro, owing to the general restlessness of Apache Indians on the reservation, and who are very insolent.

PRESENTS FOR THE ESQUIMAUX.

San Francisco, May 1.—The Bear will start in two or three weeks on a cruise in the Arctic. She will take up on this trip presents to the value of $1000 for the tribe of Esquimaux who sheltered the shipwrecked Vincent seamen.

DENIED.

Washington, May 1.—The report that Blaine was paralysed is denied at the State Department and Normandie Hotel, where Blaine is staying.

DEADLY CABLE CAR.

San Francisco, May 1.—Eugene O. F. Hastings, a pioneer and well known lawyer, was run over by a cable car last night and died from the injuries this morning.

Advices from Japan state that there is no truth in the report that Judge Denny of Oregon, the adviser of the King of Corea, had received $30,000 from Li Hung Chang, the Chinese Viceroy, to resign.

EMIN PASHA.

Once a Jew, Now a Mohomedan—Didn't Want to be Rescued.

The Spectator gives its readers the following sketch of Emin Pasha and his present position: "Originally a German Jew devoted to science and investigation, he has become in reality an independent sovereign, and having turned Mussulman, he rules the great region entrusted to him with absolute authority. His thirteen hundred black regulars have settled and married in the land, and will never, he says, return to Egypt by their own consent. He himself lives like an Asiatic, which no doubt by blood he is; and he has formed a Negro army so well disciplined that it has defeated even the fanatic soldiers sent from Khartoum. He has herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, his supplies of grain are more than ample, and he is accumulating a stock of ivory which, if the road to the northward ever opens, may bring him great wealth, in the European sense. He is, in truth, an African sovereign, and as his authority consolidates itself, and that of the Mahdi dies away under the blows it is meeting from the westward, he may hope to stretch his dominion from the Albert Nyanza northward to Khartoum. Having renounced Judaism, and quitted civilization for years, he can be little tempted to quit that position, and return to the less varied life of an almost penniless student of natural history in Berlin. There is no reason to doubt his statement that he will never desert his followers, and that if he leaves his Kingdom, he will carry with him eight thousand souls, thousands of them women and children. To march southwards with that cavalcade, through the awful forest of the Arawhimi to the Congo, or eastward to the Zanzibar coast, would be a desperate attempt; nor is there anything to be expected from the settlement, which, if he relents, he must form in some new region, to draw him from the banks of the Nile, where he is a Prince, and whence he may in time communicate easily with Germany by the Suakim route. He had, when Stanley left him, elected to stay where he is, one of the most noteworthy figures which even this age of separate personages has produced. Savants are common enough, and savants with a love of exploration; but the adventurer, who obtains a crown, or the power of a crowned head over a defined territory, is rare. Our countrymen are everywhere, but we have had in the half century only one Rajah Brooke, and it is his career, after all, which that of Sultan Schnitzler most resembles."

MR. BAKER, M.P., AND THE CHINA STEAMERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

SIR,—I can appreciate a joke as keenly as the next man, but I never laugh over an open grave, or indulge in a pun while funeral rites are in progress. Hence, sir, I was the least but shocked at the light tone of your leading article last evening. You were dealing with E. Crow Baker's shameful conduct in refusing to remain at Ottawa and discharge his duty to his constituency. How you—whose political course has been consistent, and whose predictions as to Mr. Baker's utter worthlessness as a politician, have been more than fulfilled—could find it in your heart to let him down so easily, passes my comprehension.

If ever there was a time in the history of this province when public indignation should be expressed against a public man it is now, and E. Crow Baker is that man.

You say "it is far more meritorious for Mr. Baker to sulk in his tent than for him to remain at Ottawa in an 'awkward position.'" But he need not have sulked, any more than he need have allowed himself to be placed in an awkward position. His post was at the Federal Capital. He is paid to remain there; and if duty to his constituents placed him in an awkward position, he should still have gone where duty called him.

Mr. Baker will probably console himself with the reflection that his vote would only count one on a division. But what about his "nautical knowledge?" The matter under discussion deeply concerned the commerce of this port. The Ottawa opponents of the proposition to force the China steamers to touch at Victoria or Esquimalt laid great stress on the inconvenience and loss of time that would be occasioned by the vessels touching here. Mr. Baker was the very man to have combatted these falsehoods and show that not more than one hour or two's delay would be occasioned by such call. He preferred to loiter at Victoria to doing his duty and is now an object of universal public wrath if not contempt.

Believe me, Mr. Editor, the situation is most serious. Not only has a blow been struck at Victoria's commercial supremacy by the C. P. Railway Co., aided by the Federal Government, but Mr. Baker, by "sulking in his tent," has undoubtedly assisted the enemies of this port.

A public meeting to consider the situation cannot be too speedily called. In the words of Shakespeare, the people should say to Mr. Baker, "No more be officer of mine!" JUNIUS.

An Explicit Denial of all the Principal Charges Against the Nationalists.

[By Postal Telegraph.]

London, April 30.—The Parnell commission resumed its session to-day after the Easter recess. Mr. Parnell was put in the witness box. He gave his testimony in a clear and deliberate manner. He stated that he did not know that Delaney, who testified for the Times, was connected with any plan for obtaining amnesty for any of his associates. The witness stated he had never heard of any attempt on Judge Lawson's life. He said he never was a member of any secret society. Mr. Parnell testified further that he did not know until 1877 that Mr. Biggar, nationalist member of parliament, was a Fenian. He then asked him to resign from the organization, but Biggar refused. Mr. Parnell said he had never communicated with, nor met Patrick Ford or any Fenian convict or exile in America. He first heard of the Clan-na-Gael in America. He had not left his interests in America in the hands of Patrick Ford and the Fenians, but in the hands of Dillon and his party. He had urged boycotting under certain conditions, but had never countenanced intimidation. He did not remember the circumstances of his having an interview with Lesceron in 1881, although it might have occurred. He had never said he believed that only force would redeem Ireland, but on the contrary he had no doubt that by constitutional parliamentary action the Irish leaders would achieve success. He had never suggested revolution or discussed the means by which revolution could be effected, nor had he ever been asked to authorize the payment of £30,000 to remove government officials. He had never sanctioned outrages, and knew of no payment having been made for the commission of outrages. He had not approved of Egan's suggestion that Earl Cowper and Forster and Burke, Justices Lawson and May and others, be removed. Parnell continued that he could not have approved of any such suggestion. Egan never having made it. He had never heard of the proposition from any quarter for the removal, meaning the murder, of Cowper, Forster or others, and did not know of the existence of an invincible conspiracy until after his arrest in 1883, when he was liberated from Kilmainham jail on parole that night to attend the funeral of his nephew in Paris. He met there Justin McCarthy and Quinn and Byrne. He did not know that Byrne had been a Fenian, nor did he communicate with Egan in any way while in Paris. He did not believe that Egan had supplied the Invincibles with money from the funds of the league.

WALTERS MUST PUT UP.

London, April 30—It is stated upon good authority that a number of copartners of John Walters in the ownership of the Times intend to bring suit in the chancery court to compel that gentleman to bear the expenses of the Times in its case against the Parnellites before Justice Hannen's commission out of his own personal fortune. The allegation we refer to further is based on that Mr. Walters was individually responsible for the publication of the "Parnellism and Crime" articles, and the accompanying accusations against the nationalist members, having printed them in spite of the remonstrances of his more cautious associates. If the action should be successful, Walters will be ruined financially.

London, May, 1.—In the special commission to-day, Mr. Parnell in the witness stand and his examination resumed, and in chief was completed, and Sir Richard Webster cross-examined the witness, who denied that the Clan na gael was a murder society, and the Irish World began to oppose him in May 1882, and Mr. Parnell, in answer to further questions of Sir Richard, denied in most positive terms, he ever desired to join the Fenian organization, or that he wanted to drive the landlords out of Ireland. His object was to destroy landlordism, not expel landlords. He had no idea of using illegal means for this purpose.

SMALLEY'S LETTER.

New York, May 1—Smalley's London cable to the Tribune: The Queen has abandoned her intended visit to Baron Ferdinand B. Rothschild, at Waddesdon. It was unpopular because it was thought since Her Majesty so seldom goes among her subjects that others than Baron Ferdinand had prior claims. I believe that the Queen, who likes the Rothschilds, had a strong desire to see Waddesdon itself, which is in some respects the most remarkable place in England. It is magnificent, quite unlike any other great house, and it is a creation of ten years.

SOULANGER IN LONDON.

London, May 1—General Boulanger has left the Hotel Bristol and taken up his residence in a house in Portland Place, which he leased a short time ago for six months. He had not intended to occupy the house so soon, but the hotel proprietors requested him to move on account of the vulgar curiosity which he was attracting.

THE AMERICAN CUP.

London, May 1—Lord Dunraven is dissatisfied with the conditions for the international race. It is probable he will not allow the Valkyrie to compete if the cup is to be held subject to the full terms of the deed of gift of 1887. The Valkyrie is ready for launching.

THE TURF.

London, May 1—The great New Market race for 2000 guineas was run to-day and won by Enthusiast.

The late Duke of Buckingham once related that when he joined the London and Northwestern Board, on the day of the first meeting after the election, he went to Euston Square to attend it. He was too early, and on asking a porter who was hanging about where the directors' room was, he was told that he had come too soon, and went away. On returning some little time later he again found the same man, who gave him the same information. After a longer interval the duke again came across his friend, whom he questioned as to whether the directors were not sitting. The man, very much irritated at being so often accosted, looked at him and said: "There's no use you coming about a place here; you ar'n't big enough."

Advertising Does Pay.

"When I came to my desk the other day," said John Wanamaker, the Philadelphia merchant. "I was naturally thinking about the Christmas trade which we had. We did a great deal of Christmas business in this store this year. During the ten days previous to Christmas our sales averaged about $160,000 a day. The grand total for the ten days falls only a few dollars short of a million. I spent $700 a week in advertising, and I pay a skilful man—a former newspaper editor and a good one—$1500 a month to do it for me. I make money by it. Advertising is the leverage with which this store has been raised up. I do not see how any large and successful retail business can be done without liberal advertising. I advertise in every town, except Sunday, of every daily paper in Philadelphia. Continuous advertising, like continuous work, is the most effective."

THE MODERN LYCURGUS.

Although it cannot be said that the doctrines of HENRY GEORGE are assuming the character of a craze, it is unquestionable that there is a respectable minority of English speaking people who regard them with favor, and who would like to see them practically demonstrated. Speaking for ourselves we are free to confess that we have never given HENRY GEORGE attentive study. We may say, indeed, that we have scarcely given him a superficial glance. "Progress and Poverty" to us has been more of a literary curiosity than anything else, the speculations of a dreamer, a man who, however honest himself, makes the mistake of supposing everybody else in the same category. Most everybody is familiar with Spartan history; how at the instance of LYCURGUS those people consented to an equal division of land and movables, the object being to put everybody on a common footing of equality. This condition lasted for a period of about 500 years, during which time the Spartans, though distinguished for martial prowess, made no material advancement in the arts and sciences, and when LYSANDER introduced among them Persian gold their cupidity got the better of them, and their institutions disappeared like mist before the morning sun. The Lycurgian system lasted five hundred years. Rome held together twice as long, and so has England, and yet both these nations, the latter particularly, exemplified what are called abominable conditions, that of Landlordism. But whether a parallel can be instituted between the GEORGE and LYCURGIAN systems or not, or whether GEORGE's single tax proposition, by which the Government holds the land and collects rental for the expenses of government, is original or not, it makes no difference, it is contrary to the guiding principles of mankind. Given a hundred men a hundred acres of land each, implements and everything necessary to cultivate the land properly, and fifty per cent. of this land will be mortgaged at the end of a decade, twenty-five per cent. will hold their own, the remaining twenty-five per cent. will have money in the bank. It is useless to undertake to equalize men when it is an inherent law of their natures not to remain equal. It is useless to attempt to ameliorate the condition of the lazy and incompetent by holding in check the able and the industrious. It may be claimed that such is not GEORGE's doctrine, that there is nothing to prevent men from exercising their genius and their industry. HENRY GEORGE's theory in a nutshell is an endeavour to bolster up the weak and the worthless by circumscribing energy. It proposes, it appears to us, a condition not unlike the Lycurgian system without the clause in it by which the weakly, the deformed, and the idiotic were drowned like so many kittens.

WAR.

The Oregonian, stirred by some remarks of Sir JOHN MACDONALD, and the war-like utterance of our local Mars, Col. PRIOR, gives its readers some pretty plain talk on the Behring Sea question, and in its conclusions is, as usual, not far from right. The Oregonian is quite right in saying that the question of ownership of Behring Sea, if the United States persists in maintaining its present attitude, may lead to complications between England and the United States more strained than those which existed in the matter of the Alabama claims. It does not necessarily follow, however, that the settlement of the difficulty will involve the burning of powder, and for the reason that there is a feeling in the United States that the Behring Sea is too large a body of water to be monopolised by any one nation. The privileges granted the Alaska Commercial Co. and acts of Congress subsequently passed to guarantee these privileges were made before Behring Sea had any commercial value to British Columbians, or at least so nearly contemporaneous with that period that it precludes the belief that invidious distinctions were intended. The primary object was to guarantee the Alaska Commercial Company the privileges extended in the terms of the lease, and the fact that American as well as Victoria sealers have been confiscated corroborates this view of the case. Such questions as these are slow of adjustment under any circumstances, and in this case the solution of the difficulty has been long drawn out by the lethargy of England herself. Undoubtedly the situation is fraught with danger, and there is no telling what would happen if an English gunboat should introduce "her nose" in those disputed waters. Such a course might not settle the difficulty, and a hostile gun fired would turn the hair of every Irishman in the States the wrong way. And then what? Neither England nor the United States can afford to clutch each other by the throat in the matter of a few seals, while there is a chance to settle the difficulty by arbitration. It would unsettle the world, and would be the signal for the letting of the war dogs loose in Europe. Both England and the United States understand this matter thoroughly, and so we can regard the Oregonian's pessimistic utterances with a grain of allowance.

SIR JOHN HELD RESPONSIBLE.

Col. PRIOR had another interview with Sir JOHN yesterday relative to the calling of the ships of the Japan-Australian service at this port for purpose of landing passengers and mails. The Premier as usual assured him of something which he knew was not the case, viz., that the matter rested wholly with the Imperial authorities. Such a contention is a mere subterfuge, an evasion of the whole question. The Imperial Government have no control over our revenue. The power to deal with it rests entirely with the Dominion Commons and to say that in voting subsidies the Commons cannot attach any conditions which they think proper is to indulge in sickening nonsense. To go further, the Government of SIR JOHN MACDONALD controls the popular assembly—by a reversion of the principles of constitutional government we admit—and as they failed to attach the condition to the subsidy that the steamers should call at Victoria, when bringing it before the House, we will hold him and his Government responsible if our claims are not recognized. It is well they should understand this. It is well that the Conservatives should know at whose door to lay the blame for the wreck and ruin of their party in this Province, if it is destined to come to that. Sir JOHN, of course, assured Col. PRIOR that as Sir CHARLES TUPPER was leaving for England in a few days, he would instruct him to interview the Colonial Secretary and the Imperial Postmaster General and urge that Victoria's wishes be met. This is a trifle more assuring than the conduct of the Minister in the House a few days ago, when the only support given to Mr. PRIOR came from Messrs. CARNWRIGHT, MILLS, and DAVIES, but it does not lull us into a feeling of security, and will not prevent Victoria from holding the proper parties responsible.

PARTISANSHIP.

While we deprecate the womanish trait to have the last word we find ourself compelled to indulge that propensity because of the deliberate misrepresentations of our morning contemporary. This asinte organ attributes to vigorous denouncement of political charlatanry the "slavery of faction," which is to say that the TIMES would pronounce against the Government right or wrong. Let us retrospect a little. The TIMES denounced the Government for its shiftlessness and incompetency in the well-boring business, because it honestly thought the interests of the interior demanded that the enterprise should be pushed to a vigorous conclusion. This was not partisanship; it was common sense. What did the Colonist have to say in the matter? Nothing. Unable to defend the Government it took refuge in silence, whereas if it had been non-partisan it should have committed itself to some sort of a statement. What is the difference between mute partisanship and spoken partisanship? None, unless it be that the former is cowardly. We could go on and mention other instances when the Colonist, owing to the weakness of its case, has had to resort to silent partisanship, but it is useless to fill up space with these betrayals of public interests. THE TIMES shirks no situation, however uncomfortable, by resorting to disingenuous silence. When the men it supports shall advertise their incompetency as the political tillicums of the Colonist have done, the public will not be compelled to turn to the morning paper of this city to ascertain the circumstances of the case.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The source of Gen. Boulanger's income still continues to be a puzzle to the Parisians. In spite of the most rigid search, it is impossible to find out exactly where the vast sums which the general dispenses so liberally come from. At present this is most extraordinary since the output is so large. As an instance, take Boulanger's present quarters in Brussels. He has taken a whole floor in the principal hotel of the city, and actually has a more expensive suite than Beaconsfield had when he represented Great Britain at the Berlin Conference.

The ravages of smallpox are forcibly illustrated in the report just made by Dr. Barry, the local Government commissioner, of the epidemic which broke out in Sheffield in 1887-88. Patients were admitted to the borough hospital in Winter street, and this hospital became a pestilential center, from which disease radiated and spread until it became positively dangerous to dwell within several thousand feet of it. In a radius of 4000 feet around the hospital there were 2330 infected houses, out of a total of 5006 infected in the whole borough. Instead of diminishing disease the hospital practically spread it on all sides, so that the severity of the epidemic in Sheffield was due mainly to the presence of a smallpox hospital in a densely populated district. The vaccinated children were attacked at the rate of 5 per 1000; unvaccinated, 101 per 1000; the death rate was 1 in 11,000 vaccinated, and 44 per 1000 of unvaccinated. Of adults the rate of attack was 2 per 1000 among twice vaccinated, 19 among the once vaccinated, and amongst the unvaccinated 94.

—Mr. John Anderson, Grassmere, Ont., writes: "The Vegetable Discovery you sent me is all gone, and I am glad to say that it has greatly benefitted those who have used it. One man in particular says it has made him a new man, and he cannot say too much for its cleansing and curative qualities."

—NO ONE BUYS A "PIG IN A POKE"—In other words, purchases on mere guesswork—who buys for his or her relief Norton & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The fact is too well known to leave room for any peradventure that it is a sovereign curative for Indigestion, Costiveness, Impurities of the Blood, Kidney and Female troubles, and other infirmities.

A Judge's Strict Impartiality.

Mr. Justice Stephen, of England, has assuredly a most impartial mind. In court recently, alluding to the case of a defendant who sought to escape liability for certain expenditure by throwing the blame of ordering it upon his wife, His Lordship characteristically blurted out: "That is a very old excuse. I often felt that Adam—I mean—that is—well I—I have always wished to hear Eve's account of that transaction."

Short Names for Lucky Duellists.

A short man is said to be quicker on trigger than a tall man, and a man with a short name is said to come out best in a duel. Colonel Cash, the South Carolina duellist, used to say that in every regular duel fought in the United States the man with the fewest syllables in his surname always killed his antagonist. He mentioned the cases of Burr and Hamilton, Barron and Decatur, and others, and that it had been true ever since David killed Goliah. A few months later Colonel Cash added to the record by killing Shannon in a duel.—Atlanta Constitution.

Sunday Trains Stopped.

In deference to the Ministerial Association, which some time ago started a provincial agitation for the reduction of Sunday traffic on the railways, Supt. Morford has issued an order to the effect that in future Sunday freight traffic on the Michigan Central railway through Canada will be discontinued. No freight trains will be run over the road between Buffalo and Detroit from 6 p. m. Saturday until 6 a. m. Monday, with the exception of stock and perishable goods, and any train leaving a terminal point and in transit at 6 p. m. Saturday will be switched off at the first terminal point reached. The order will go into effect at once.

C. P. Huntington as a Philanthropist.

Seldom a story comes home with more genuine pathos than that of the baker's dozen of messenger boys who appealed to C. P. Huntington not to cut down their little salaries of $12 a month. C. P. Huntington's name, with many, is a synonym for monopoly, and the world knows him as a hard hearted man of the world who rules an immense transportation business with a rod of iron. Scarce anything could have occurred to make the world feel differently; but this little story of "Jack" the messenger boy's interview with him when he presented their simple ungrammatical memorial, will leave a different impression. Jack thought he was almost crying, for he saw water in his eyes and drops running down his cheeks into his whiskers. The railroad magnate has a heart and the simple appeal of "us messenger boys" touched in a tender place.

Suicides.

It is called a mania, and yet in the United States since the first of January there has been over six hundred suicides. Five suicides in Chicago in one day, and it is figured that if self-destruction keeps up at this ratio, that is, at the rate of over six hundred since the beginning of the year, the number at the expiration of twelve months will reach 2,500 in the country at large. The increase of the suicidal mania, indeed, through a series of years is appalling. In 1881 the number was 605, and every year since it has steadily increased until last year it had reached 1,587. From the first of January to the present date the number is 608. There is a general impression that suicides are confined to comparatively unknown unfortunates. This is true to a certain extent, but during the last three months the suicides of prominent persons have been numerous. Three clergymen, three postmasters, six physicians, twelve well-to-do merchants, seven office-holders, three lawyers, three bankers, four railroad officials (one of them a president), two artists, three mayors, one journalist, one army officer, and two capitalists, for various reasons have voluntarily shuffled off the mortal coil. Where is this thing to end? We present these significant statistics to the students of moral science and social economics as worth their study.

For Toilet Use.

Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps the hair soft and pliant, imparts to it the lustre and freshness of youth, causes it to grow luxuriantly, eradicates Dandruff, cures all scalp diseases, and is the most cleanly of all hair preparations.

AYER'S Hair Vigor has given me perfect satisfaction. I was nearly bald for six years, during which time I used many hair preparations, but without success. Instead, what little hair I had was growing thinner, until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used two bottles of the Vigor, and my head is now well covered with a new growth of hair. —Judson B. Chapel, Peabody, Mass.

HAIR that has become weak, gray, and faded, may have new life and color restored to it by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "My hair was thin, faded, and dry, and fell out in large quantities. Ayer's Hair Vigor stopped the falling, and restored my hair to its original color. As a dressing for the hair, this preparation has no equal.—Mary N. Hammond, Stillwater, Minn.

VIGOR, youth, and beauty, in the appearance of the hair, may be preserved for an indefinite period by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "A disease of the scalp caused my hair to become harsh and dry, and to fall out freely. Nothing I tried seemed to do me any good until I commenced using Ayer's Hair Vigor. Three bottles of this preparation restored my hair to a healthy condition, and it is now soft and pliant. My scalp is cured, and it is also free from dandruff.—Mrs. E. R. Foss, Milwaukee, Wis.

BEAUTIFUL JIM.

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER.

CHAPTER XXIII.

FOR THE OLD MAN'S SAKE.

Undoubtedly it was the most bitter moment which had ever come into Nancy Earle's life, when she stood tightly clasped in the arms of the man who loved her, the man she loved, and learned the true story of the terrible murder which had taken place in Walmsbury barracks; when she learned with shame and anguish that it was no other than the last of her proud race who had done this damnable and cowardly deed.

She was so ashamed! That was the key-note of her thoughts—shame, only shame. Although she had not known it, she had been proud of her faith and trust in the man she loved—she had unconsciously been thrilled with a delightful sense of pleasure in her own brave faithfulness, which could stand up, though all the world should be against him and all the evidence of circumstances might conspire to do him to death, and yet say: "I love this man—I believe in him—he is incapable of this vile thing that is laid to his charge."

Yes, there had been something grand and noble in her love, and she had felt that, come what might in the after years, he could and would always feel that the woman he loved had never wavered in her trust of him. And then, after all, to find out that he had kept silence for her sake and for that of the old father who had borne his good name as a bright jewel to be guarded and treasured, that he had kept silence in the face of a charge which could, and most probably would, cling to him all the rest of his life. Oh! it was a bitter, bitter blow to the girl who had been reared in pride, and whose training had been one of honor.

In those few minutes of reflection she went back over the years of the past, the years during which she had willingly stood on one side for her younger brother, because he was the last of the Earles, because he was a boy and she was only a girl—a girl—a thing of no particular importance, and though she was an Earle like him, yet she was an Earle who did not count. There was no thought, or room for such in her mind, of pity for any temptation which might have led him to do this horrible thing—she had no feeling of mercy toward him. Oh! no, only a wild, indignant sort of rage possessed her that he should have stained and sullied the fair name he bore, and have put upon his living relatives a shame which they must carry with them to the grave.

She broke from the clasp of Jim's arms and turned to the window, where she stood looking out upon the square, speechless from anger, and a whirl of hot indignant thoughts chasing one another through her mind; and at last she turned back to where he was still standing.

"You must tell my father," she said, decidedly. "Yes—yes—I know all that you would say. But I am doing what I know he would like best if he knew. It will be an awful blow to him, but he would never forgive me if he found out that I had kept such a thing from him."

Beautiful Jim shook his head.

"I will not tell him," he said, firmly. "In the face of suspicion he has trusted me, and I will not reward him in that way. I could not, my darling, even for you."

"But if he were to find out," she began.

"Then he never must find it out," rejoined Jim, firmly. "Who is to tell him?"

"I will," said Nancy.

"It will be his death blow—it will kill him! He has always been the best of fathers to you, and for the sake of that young"—he broke an ugly word off here and substituted a milder one for it—"that young idiot, would you reward him thus? No, my child, I am sure you will see that it cannot be! Besides, he is so old and we are young. We can wait a little for each other."

"And he is to go on in his wickedness unpunished, holding his head as high as he will!" she exclaimed.

Jim could not help smiling as he remembered Tommy's piteously abject air on the evening before poor dear old Owen's funeral at Walmsbury.

"The poor young beggar is not holding his head very high, my dearest," he said, gently. "Besides, for the sake of your father, we can leave his punishment to a higher Will than ours."

"Is it possible that you have any pity for him?" she cried, incredulously.

"Yes, that I have," Jim answered. "It is no light matter to have murder on your mind, and he doesn't look as if he found it so."

"Ah! you don't know him," Nancy cried. "I do. He is like an india rubber ball—while you hold him tight he is crushed and quiet, but once release your grip of him and he is as full of bounce as ever. If he knows that you know, I can well believe that he is humble and abject to you. That has been his way out of difficulty and danger ever since he was a boy—a baby; but now that he is out of your sight, I would not mind staking my very life that he is flirting with one of the Leslie girls at this moment."

"Not at this moment," said Jim, smiling sadly, "if you would be very accurate, that is—but likely enough he is thinking about it."

She flushed up angrily all over her fair face.

"I can not understand you," she cried. "He was your friend, your best friend—and yet you willingly let his assassin go free—you"——

"Don't you understand that your brother is sacred to me? Jim asked, gravely. "For himself, for his sake, I would not have held my hand one moment, and he knows it. Right willingly and cheerfully would I see him hanged to-morrow—nay, this very day."

Nancy shuddered at the dreadful word, but she did not attempt to speak, and Jim went on.

"But he is your brother—that made him safe from me in the first instance; now, since your father has shown me such trust and generosity, I could not betray him except to save my own life; even then it would be a hard task for me to be compelled to speak."

And then poor Nancy broke down altogether, and began to weep bitterly and passionately, and somehow Jim got his arms round her again and drew her head down upon his breast, soothing her as if she were a weary child in distress.

"There, there, my darling, don't cry so," he murmured. "At least let us wait a little while and see what happens. We are young, and it may only be a little time to wait, and if we love one another always, it will soon go past; and it is not as if we were to be kept apart altogether."

"It's so hard," she sobbed; "and are you to be under this hideous suspicion while he flaunts about as 'the last of the Earles?' And is my father to put all his trust and faith in him blindly and believe in him still? Oh! I know how good, how unselfish you are, Jim, to do this; but it is a cruel deception on an old man—it is, indeed. I am sure no good will ever come of it. And what am I to say if—if—oh! I mean when they say that you did it? And people will say it, Jim; I know it."

"But their saying it won't make it true," he said, quietly. "And, after all, you can always say that you believe in me, you know. And, Nancy, my dear love, do you think that I shall ever forget that when all the world might have been justified in being against me you were my own brave, loyal hearted darling, who believed in me apart from all the evidence that seemed to be against me—do you think that I shall ever forget that? Oh! my love, my own darling, how little you realize what my love for you is if you can think so for one moment."

And thus Beautiful Jim won the day, conquered in the battle, against his own interests, against all that would have made him the happiest man upon God's green earth that day, and, after a little while Nancy got over her first burst of indignation against young Tommy, and became more calm and collected. And then she was in a measure able to realize Beautiful Jim's real worth, to have some idea what a brave, true hearted, honest gentleman she had won for her own.

"But," she said suddenly, and in a stern, determined voice, "there is one thing, Jim, that you must never ask me to do, for I never will. That is, as long as I live, to acknowledge Stuart as my brother. When you go back to Blankhampton you must tell him that I know the truth, and that so far as is necessary to blind my father I will behave to him as I have always done; but out of my father's presence he must distinctly understand that he is, for the future, dead to me. I have consented—unwillingly, as you know—to help to hide his crime for my old father's sake, and for that alone; but I have not yet sunk so low as to have any dealings with a criminal. So make that absolutely clear to him, and tell him, too, that I am bound by no promise of secrecy—and if he in the smallest way presumes upon the knowledge that we wish to keep it from my father, I shall have neither hesitation nor compunction in speaking out at once."

"Very well, I'll make it clear to him," said Jim, quietly.

And presently she asked him to tell her the precise details of the terrible event, and, after a good deal of persuasion, Jim complied and did so. Then, for the first time, she learned all there was to know about Rose Meeking, the bar maid at the Duck's Tail, and the part which she had taken in the tragedy.

"I must see her," she said. "I must do something for her; I wonder what it is possible I can do? She must be a good woman, a very good woman, or she would have used her knowledge to marry him before this. Anyway, I must see her. It will not be easy unless she comes to town, but it must be managed somehow."

It was not very long after this that Mr. Earle retired from the club, if the truth be told, in a very uneasy frame of mind as to the manner in which Nancy might have taken his decision. He went into the room where they still were together, and Jim got up with a sort of apology for his presence.

"I am here still, sir," he said, by way of excuse. "You see we had a good deal to talk over, and"——

"As long as you like, as long as you like, my dear fellow," the old man cried. "I am only very sorry that"——

"Father," broke in Nancy, "I want to say something. I have never disobeyed you in my life, but I want you to give me my way now. I shall never marry any other man but this," laying her hand on Jim's arm; "and although we will wait for your consent to our marriage, I must be able and free to see him as often as I like."

"I shall never marry any other man."

A PLEASING PICTURE.

Family Prayers in the White House Led by the President.

Augusta, Ga., Chronicle: There is one picture in the White House that draws the President and his family near the people and makes the country feel that, regardless of politics, a good man is at the head of our government, and that the home of the highest in office is a pattern for every fireside of the republic, whether of rich or humble degree.

There is something quaint and good in the statement, which we accept as true, that every morning and evening the family assembles in the dining room of the executive mansion. The President leads in short Bible reading and devotional services. The scene is simple but striking. It reminds us of the home life among the crofters in Scotland, so well described by Burns when he rehearses in faultless verse the annals of the yeomanry:

"Perhaps the wanton weans in thoughtless mood
Too much neglect their duty and their food;
Or maybe, worst of ills to poor folk's grandsires,
Misfortune's sneaking, cold, contracting iron
That make her loved at home, revered abroad,
Princes and lords are but the breath of kings—
"An honest man's the noblest work of God."
The cottage leaves the palace far behind.

Bill Nye Goes Back East.

The Pacific coast is not to hear Bill Nye yet awhile. He has cancelled all his engagements and gone back to New York. He telegraphed from Kansas City that he was suffering from spinal trouble and was worn out from overwork. In addition to these misfortunes Mr. Nye received word that his four children were ill with scarlet fever in New York. This decided him and he immediately returned to that city.

"I wish my wife would get well or—something," said a husband who had been sorely tried with an invalid wife. It seems a heartless speech, but who can tell the discomforts of a home where the wife is always sick. Poor food, crying children! No wonder the man grows desperate. But if he would get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for the wife, he would find that the sunshine would return to his home. One Hundred Years From Now.

What will the population of this continent be? Who shall say? The United States to-day contains over 60,000,000 people, who increase at the rate of about 25 per cent in every decade, so that at the close of the next century the increment would have run up to a total of not less than 400,000,000 souls. Twice the population of all the other states and countries and another 400,000,000 will be easily added. In the year of our Lord 2000, and the year of the Independence of the United States the 224th, it will no longer be the United States of North America, but the United States of North Central and South America, and the then president will then issue his thanksgiving day proclamation to nearly a thousand million people. The mind fails to grasp the industrial and commercial expansion at that day; the wonderful progress in the arts and sciences; the tremendous energy with which enterprise after enterprise will be conceived and made a reality. And then congress. Just think what congress will be then! But, stop! Better not think. When we contemplate what it is now, with 400 members, the idea of what it will be with 4,000 is simply appalling.—Petersburgh (Va) Index-Appeal.

Histogenetic System,

—THE—

Entire Revolution of Medicine!

VICTORIA, B.C., January 25th 1889.

DR. J. EUGENE JORDAN:

Dear Sir—I have much pleasure in testifying to the virtues of your medicines. I was paralyzed from the hips down; could not stand on my limbs without support, was induced to try your medicines; in six weeks could walk and was perfectly cured; shortly after using the medicine two months; it is four months since I stopped the medicine and no sign of the trouble returning.

Victoria, B. C., 25th January 1889.

DR. J. EUGENE JORDAN:

Dear Sir—I have very great pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficiency of your medicines. I was taken down with Rheumatic fever early in the spring which never seemed to entirely leave me, stung in the summer my joints became so stiff and I was so crippled with Rheumatism that I could not walk without the help of a cane I suffered very much pain which your medicines effected to move. I tried your medicine which cured me in a few weeks; I am now able to work and do not hesitate to recommend your medicines to the public, in my opinion there is nothing like them to cure Rheumatism.

DR. J. EUGENE JORDAN M. D.

Dear Sir—I have much pleasure in adding my testimony to the efficiency of your medicines. I was suffering severely from an attack of Quinsy, a friend of mine recommended your medicines, which I began using, and in a few hours the pain was gone. I can recommend Histogenetic medicines as a specific in that complaint.

DR. J. EUGENE JORDAN.

Dear Sir—As I am about to leave the country I think it is my duty to you and the public that I should thank your agent, Mr. Dealtry, for introducing your medicine to me. I have been very bad for five years with rheumatism and paralysis; I tried everything but got no relief until I tried your medicine, in 36 hours great relief, so much so that I will take a supply with me, and when out I will send for more. Sir, I remain yours, T. H. FORSYTH.

Minister Foster's Speech.

Anyone wishing to obtain a copy of Finance Minister Foster's budget speech can do so by calling at Mr. David Hart's cigar store, Government street, Mr. Prior having sent out enough to enable everyone to obtain a free copy. While one may not agree with everything contained in the speech, there is much information in it that would be useful to those who care to read it.

The New Oddfellows' Lodge.

The new lodge of I. O. O. F. at Vancouver, to be known as Western Star No. 10, will be instituted by Grand Master Meldrum and other officers of the grand lodge, on Friday evening next. A cordial invitation is extended to all members of the order. Single fare tickets ($3 each) will be issued by the C. P. N. Co. to Oddfellows who purpose attending. Brothers who intend being present from Victoria are requested to send their names to Grand Master Meldrum.

Might Have Been Larger.

The steamer Alaskan will be placed on the Victoria-Sound route this summer, previous to which the vessel will enter the San Francisco dry dock. The reason ascribed for not utilizing the Esquimalt dock is that it lacks the necessary width, the Alaskan having a beam of sixty-five feet, five more than the width of the dock. The dock at San Francisco is ninety feet wide and five hundred feet in length, considerably larger than the Esquimalt dock. When the Olympian entered the latter its width was taxed to the utmost, the vessel being canted over on her side to obtain ingress.

"My Government."

The Provincial Secretary is at present on the mainland doing Vancouver and New Westminster. He appears to have informed the Columbian that he had gone up to attend to school matters and one thing and another like that, though the little glorification over the $40,000 which "my government"—mind you, "resolved to spend in improving the institution" sounds more like electioneering than anything else. But this is not all. The honorable gentleman also said it was "decided to defer the erection of the court house until next year when $20,000 for that purpose will be voted." The coolness of our honorable friend is refreshing.

Encourage Home Manufacture.

A proposition will come before the Council this evening to use the Oriel drain pipes for the construction of city sewers. It is to be hoped that the Council will be able to accept the proposition. The Oriel pipe has been declared by competent authorities to combine all the qualities required in the best sewer and drain pipes. It has stood very trying tests and has been adopted for the drainage of the Jubilee Hospital and other buildings. A test made by Wilson Bros. showed that the pipe bursted under a hydraulic pressure of 63 pounds to the square inch. Mr. Jno. Teague, the well-known architect, says this pressure in ordinary use would never take place, and he concludes that "the resistance to external pressure would be correspondingly sufficient to meet all demands." Messrs. Langley & Co. certify that the pipe will resist composition feels better than ordinary clay brick. With such recommendations as these it is fair to assume that the home-made pipe is equal if not superior to any imported article. It is durable, nonporous and cheap. It is the intention of Messrs. Gabriel & Co., should the corporation decide to utilize their invention, to erect $10,000 works at once. Otherwise, they will probably make their headquarters at some other city, and thus a most important and permanent industry will be lost to Victoria.

A Tournament of Song.

The Tournament of Song given last night at The Victoria by the St. James Choral Society was listened to by a large and appreciative audience.

The introduction consisted of the solo "Spirit of Song," by Miss Bowden, and the "Herald," by Mr. C. W. Rhodes.

Very properly, America was first illustrated in song; the song "Old Folks at Home" being given by Miss Bate, followed by "Our Native Song," by Mr. Lombard, the choruses "Star Spangled Banner," "Oh, We'll Rally Round the Flag," "Hail Columbia," "And This Dear Land" and "Oh, Yes, to Thee, Sweet Liberty," and the quartette "Hail, Hail to Sweet Liberty," by Misses Arrowsmith and Vidler and Messrs. Worsfold and Leggatt.

Germany was represented in the chorus "Where are Skies of Tender Blue," song "Serenade," by Miss Arrowsmith, with violin obligato by Miss Angus; "Spinning Chorus" march, "Joyful We Greet Thee"; and waltz, "Beautiful Blue Danube," by Miss Bowden, Miss Mowat, Mrs. Goepel and Miss Arrowsmith.

"A Song for Tyrol Land," given by Miss Mowat, Mrs. Goepel, Miss Arrowsmith and Mr. Rhodes, brought near the hills of Switzerland; while sunny Italy's music was represented by the duett "Tutte le Feste," by Miss Mowat and Mr. McKiernan, and the chorus "Oh Italia Beloved."

"Sing for France in Joyous Measure," "La Marseillaise," by Mr. C. W. Lombard, and the chorus "With the Colors Gaily Flying," followed next for La Belle France.

"Gra Ma Chree," by Mr. McKiernan, Miss Wolfenden, Mrs. Goepel, Mr. G. F. Matthews and Mr. C. Leggatt; and Miss Bowden's song, "By Killarney's Lakes Fells," brought the heart to the Emerald Isle, while the chorus of "Bonnie Dundee," with solo by Mr. Chas. Dampier, and "Coming Thro the Rye," by Miss Bate, carried the listener on to the land of the heather.

Merrie England's music brought the programme to a close, "Hearts of Oak," being given by Mrs. Rhodes; "Tell Me, My Heart," by Miss Bowden; "Rule, Britannia," by Mr. Dampier, and the chorus, "From Britannia's Sea girt Isle," and "Oh, Hush Thee, My Baby," by the society.

THE ORPHAN'S HOME

A Proposal to Erect a New Building—The Directors Meet.

At a meeting of the directors of the Protestant Orphans' Home, held last evening, the question of enlarging the building, owing to the large number of children in the home, was considered. It was found, after careful consideration, that it would cost so much to alter the present building and make it suitable for its purposes that a new one might as well be undertaken. In addition to this it was considered that the grounds would be altogether too small for any more children than are at present in the Home. With a view to securing a new site and erecting a new building a committee, composed of the Rev. Mr. McLeod, A. A. Green, Esq., and Postmaster Shakespeare, were appointed to see what could be done. It is hoped the committee will receive every encouragement in their good work. If some generous one among the many wealthy citizens of Victoria would donate a site he would be doing an action which would confer everlasting honor upon him. With such assistance the committee would be enabled to proceed at once with the erection of a building which would meet all requirements for some years to come.

KOOTENAY NEWS.

A Sawmill for Lower Kootenay—Transportation Facilities, Etc.

[From our own Correspondent.]

Mr. O. O. Buchanan is selling out his sawmill business at Revelstoke and Illecillewaet, and removing to Lower Kootenay Lake. Mr Buchanan has bought Doctor Hendry's sawmill, which is now at Kootenay station, and, on the N. P., and is having it moved in to the lake, via Bonner's Ferry. It will be erected near the Narrows, at an intermediate point between the Toad Mountain, Warm Springs and Galena Bay mines. He has also secured a timber limit and expects to have the mill running in June, and will make all kinds of house building lumber. There is no road via Canadian territory except a pack trail, and no arrangement by which Canadian goods or machinery can be bonded (except in the case of express parcels). For this reason Mr. Buchanan is compelled to buy machinery in the United States and pay Canadian duties upon it.

Neither the Columbia and Kootenay Co. nor the Kootenay and Athabasca Co. have as yet made any move in the way of beginning construction. But the Spokane and Colville branch is being rushed and the N. P. people have explored a line from Kootenay Station to Bonner's Ferry. This is but 22 miles in length and over a very level country.

Freight rates at present by wagon and steamboat, Kootenay station to the mines, are about $30 per ton; passenger fare, stage and steamer, $8; meals 50 cents. Fare from Revelstoke to Sproat's Landing, per steamer Dispatch, is $7; from thence good walking 30 miles to Nelson.

The mines are showing up very satisfactorily and men from the N. P. are going in at the rate of ten to twenty per day.

Three years ago many big stumps in Kootenay were placarded with "Vote for Col. Baker and Progress." The sentiment of the majority is now that the result has been rather too much Col Baker, and rather too little Progress.

SPORTING NEWS.

THE TURF.

The horse racing at Seattle was not over satisfactory on Monday on account of alleged crooked work by one of the jockies. There were three entries, Cowboy, Sleepy Dick (from B. C.) and Triggertail. Sleepy Dick was a great favorite, pools selling at $20 on him to $7 on Cowboy, the second choice. At the start they got off with Cowboy in the lead, which he increased, Dick evidently being pulled or it was the worst riding ever exhibited. Adamson, who is well known in Victoria, was Sleepy Dick's rider. It is said he would have got a bad drubbing if the crowd had got a hold of him.

DUNRAVEN'S YACHT.

London, April 30. The new yacht Valkyrie is now ready for launching. Lord Dunraven, her owner, is much discontented with the arrangements thus far entered into for competition for America's cup, and it is not probable he will compete, if the cup is to be held subject to the full terms of the deed of 1887.

THE BRITISH COLUNBIA FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY. TAKES RISKS ON THE CASH OR MUTUAL PLANS. As this is a Home Company, organized by British Columbians for the two-fold purpose of giving cheap insurance and keeping the money in this Province, it commends itself to the support of every insurer desiring the prosperity of this country. In Ontario, the system of insurance, which is similar to that adopted by this Company, has been in highly successful operation for the past fifty years, and it has proved to be a great advantage to every insurer in it, by reducing the cost of insurance, and it is estimated that now three-fourths of the insurance effected in Ontario is carried by mutual companies.
